Adina Pintilie. You Are Another Me. A Cathedral Of the Body

On intimacy, desire and non-normative bodies

Exhibition view, Adina Pintilie. You Are Another Me. A Cathedral Of the Body, WKV 2023, Photo: Florian Model

At the end of the exhibition Adina Pintilie. You Are Another Me. A Cathedral of the Body (until January 14, 2024), the Württembergischer Kunstverein is hosting a rich program on intimacy, desire and non-normative bodies from January 7–14, 2024. In addition to the premiere of the performance Waffenstillstand by Adina Pintilie on January 11, 2024, which activates areas of the exhibition, it includes other performances, screenings of films such as Orlando: My Political Biography by Paul B. Preciado and a book presentation of the same, as well as discussions on topics such as the right to pleasure and sexuality of people with diverse bodies. The program was developed in part in collaboration with Queerdenker e.V., Wildwasser and Natascha Cid, Pierre Mayer and Alexandra Lederer from Stuttgart.

The exhibition marks the latest stage of Pintilie's multi-platform research on the politics and poetics of intimacy and the body. Through different artistic languages and mediums—including installation, cinema, sculpture, and performance—her long-term, trans-disciplinary inquiry explores notions of how we relate to our own bodies and those of others. It contributes to the current conversations towards reassessing the normative in gender, sexuality, bodily ability and diversity. More information on the exhibition: www.wkv-stuttgart.de

PERFORMANCE PROGRAM

Sunday, January 7, 2024, 5–8 p.m.

Queer in Short Format is intended to focus on queer performance artists and to approach the topic of queer bodies with curiosity. This evening will explore intimacy, vulnerability and sexuality and create a space for the powerful connection between performance and queer experiences. We break with stereotypes and think bodies outside of binary systems - somewhere between "you" and "me", between masculine and feminine, between closeness and distance. Who are we in relation to our bodies? And who are we outside of our bodies?

Alexandra Lederer, Auf/Begehren, 2023

VIDEO, 14'

With Natascha Cid and Pierre Mayer

Language: German

In this video, Natascha Cid and Pierre Mayer from Stuttgart talk about the difficulties of talking openly about the pleasure and sexuality of people with disabilities, resp. of functionally diverse persons. Yet, as Mayer emphasizes, they know exactly what they want. But in private and public life, the topic is usually suppressed, often by parents. That is why it is important for Cid, among other things, that there is more publicity on this topic. Cid and Mayer break the silence and demand that their bodies are taken seriously as desirable and desiring bodies.

CONVERSATION

Language: German

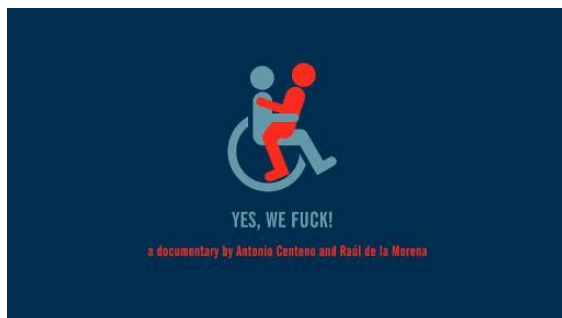

After the screening, Cid and Mayer talk with Alexandra Lederer, who made the video, and Iris Dressler, who directs the Kunstverein, about the concerns, wishes and demands they associate with the video. Together with the audience, they like to discuss how the current situation can be changed, particularly in Stuttgart and Baden-Württemberg. Unlike in Berlin, for example, there are no projects and networks here that empower the sexuality of people with disabilities.

Natascha Cid and Pierre Mayer have been politically committed to inclusion and the rights of people with disabilities since 2010. Alexandra Lederer is a sex educator.

The exhibition You Are Another Me. A Cathedral of the Body marks the latest stage of Adina Pintilie's multi-platform research on the politics and poetics of intimacy and the body. Through different artistic languages and mediums—including installation, cinema, sculpture, and performance—her long-term, trans-disciplinary inquiry explores notions of how we relate to our own bodies and those of others.

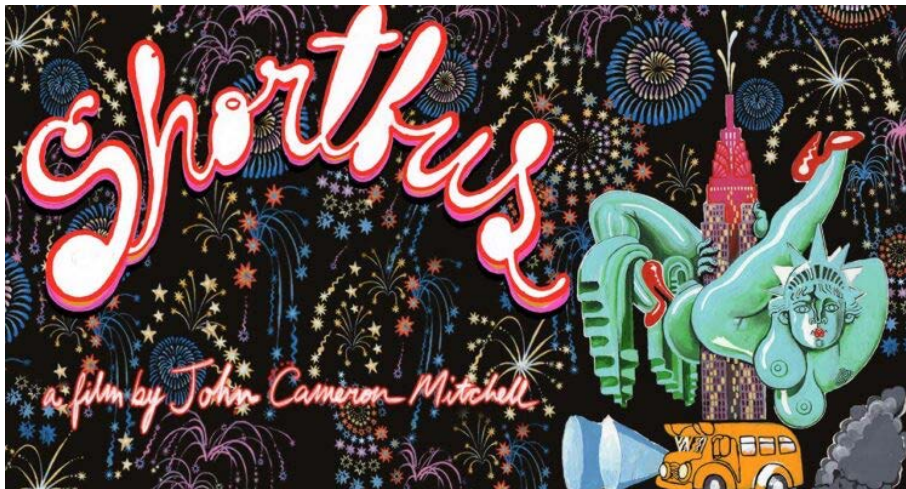

The exhibition, considerably re-arranging and extending the project, unveils, for the first time, Pintilie's new performative-cinematic installation. Within the premises of an exhibition space, the work reenacts the filmic apparatus situated at the core of Pintilie's practice, the 'alchemical space' in which, according to the artist, reality and cinema merge. At the end of the exhibition, this new work will be activated through a two-and-a-half hour long live performance. Here, the protagonists of You Are Another Me, together with Pintilie and her team, invite the audience to witness, and become participants in their filming process, referred to by the artist as the process of 'emotional incubation'.

Shortbus

PROGRAM

John Cameron Mitchell, Shortbus, USA 2006

Film, 102', age: 18+

"A group of New Yorkers caught up in their romantic/sexual milieu converge at Shortbus, an underground Brooklyn salon infamous for its blend of art, music, politics, and carnality, and loosely inspired by various underground NYC gatherings that took place in the early 2000s. Here, gay couple Jamie and James meet Ceth, a young ex-model and aspiring singer."

Panel with Valentin Leuschel, Yvonne Wolz, and others

Language: German

Following the screening, a panel will offer the opportunity to place Adina Pintilie's cinematic works in relation to John Cameron Mitchell's Shortbus and to discuss, to a certain extent, the shadows that her work casts: While topics such as intimacy and desire are explicitly presented with their positive possibilities and the protagonists are people who actively and consciously deal with these topics, the panel will also address the deficits and blind spots of sex-positive approaches and spaces and open up a space for topics such as shame, violence and fears. The audience is cordially invited to contribute their own experiences and needs arising from their visit to the exhibition and to participate in the discussion.

BOOK PRESENTATION

Lorenza Böttner, Requiem for the Norm

Edited by Paul B. Preciado and WKV

With Paul Preciado, Iris Dressler and others

Language: English

“Overlooked by the dominant historiography of art until relatively recently, the work of Lorenza Böttner—an artist who painted with her mouth and feet, and who used photography, drawing, dance, installation, and performance as means of aesthetic expression—emerges today as an indispensable contribution to the history of contemporary painting and performance, as well as to the criticism of bodily and gender normalization in the late twentieth century. Exercises of resistance to a medical and exoticizing gaze that reduces the functionally diverse or trans and nonbinary body to the status of specimen and object, Lorenza’s works are characterized not only by the use of self-fiction, the dissident imitation of visual styles from the history of art, and bodily experimentation, but also by criticism of the disciplinary divide between genres and genders, between painting, dance, performance, and photography, between masculine and feminine, between homosexuality and heterosexuality, between the cis body and the trans body, between object and subject, between active and passive, and between valid and invalid. In what frame of representation can a body make itself visible as human? Who has the right to represent? Who is the represented? Can an image grant or deny a body political agency? How can a body construct an image in order to become a political subject? Is there any aesthetic difference between an image made with the hand and another made with the foot, or does this difference reflect a position of power? These are some of the questions posed by Lorenza Böttner’s visual and performative work.” (Paul B. Preciado)

Orlando: My Political Biography

A film by Paul B. Preciado, FR 2023, 98’

Original French version with German subtitles

In 1928, Virginia Woolf wrote Orlando, the first novel in which the main character changes sex in the middle of the story. A century later, trans writer and activist Paul B. Preciado decides to send a film letter to Virginia Woolf: her Orlando has come out of her fiction and is living a life she could have never imagined. A century after the publication of Orlando: A Biography by Virginia Woolf, Paul B. Preciado, philosopher and trans activist, addresses a letter to tell her that her character has come true: the world is becoming Orlandesque. Preciado calls a cast: “Who are the contemporary Orlandos?” 25 different people, all trans and non-binary, from 8 years old to 70 who come to play Woolf’s fictional character while also narrating their own lives; and a series of mid twentieth century trans archives that evoke the real historical Orlandos in their struggle for recognition and visibility. The spectator gradually finds Orlando’s bearings as the portrait emerges of a collective being with multiple faces, voices, bodies. The film follows the same structure as the Virginia Woolf’s novel: a travel diary through history, both intimate and political. “I first read Woolf’s book when I was a teenager in Spain, well before I knew that gender transitioning was possible. Woolf’s fictional character allowed me to imagine my own life, to desire and to embody change. It turns out that with the years, I have become an Orlando. My biography is made of the collective history of thousands of invisible Orlandos. It is a history of struggle within an oppressive gender and sex binary regime. Being trans is not just to transition from femininity to masculinity (or vice versa), but to engage in a process of internal “orlandisation”: a poetic journey in which a new language to name oneself and the world is invented.” A gender transition is a transformative voyage, a movement of disidentification, a practice of freedom, rather than a mere production of identity. Thus, the film draws the portrait of a changing world and the ongoing gender and non-binary revolution. (From: https://www.thepartysales.com/wp-content/uploads/2023/02/ORLANDO_DP-print_A5_web.pdf)
